A specimen of the Khaksar "currency notes" referred to in the article is placed below. The note bears Inayatullah's signature and has the following inscription: "I promise to pay the bearer the value indicated when India becomes independent". Such notes came to notice about eight years ago but we have no information to show that these are again being distributed in the manner described in the article. The specimen may please be returned. Md. Ashiq of Peshawar is apparently a disgruntled Khaksar, who has resuscitated this old "currency" in an attempt to injure Mashriqi.

TRANSLATION.

CURRENCY NOTES ISSUED BY NAWAB-I-BE MULK (NAWAB WITHOUT A STATE) INAYAT ULLAH MASHRIQI.

Promise to pay the money on the liberation of India.

Mohammad Ashiq of Mohalla Sarai Kala Khen in Peshawar
City has sent the following message for publication :-

I enlisted myself in the Belcha Fauj (Army of spades) on being led astray by the slippery talks of Inayat Ullah Mashriqi, and was made a Salar, and remained as such for a long time. At last I studied the true state of affairs and it became clear to me that this movement was frivolous and meaningless. So I segregated my connection with it. The army under my control melted away also out of disgust. I am sending to you testimonials of my training, and writs, and currency notes issued by Inayat Ullah. You please publicise the fact that this man issues currency notes as well and deceives people by giving out that these are bills of exchange to be cashed on sight. Below is the impression of the currency note :

( map of India with crescent, star, nos. etc.)

These notes are generally given to Salars who are promised that when the British will quit India and the auspicious moment of Inayat Ullah's coronation will come hard cash will be given in exchange for these notes from the mint of Inayat Ullah.
